439th AW MISSION: Actively support national objectives on a global scale with ready, mobility forces

Another set of challenges

To date, we have faced a host of requirements that were set in motion following the events of September 11. We have responded in an absolutely superb manner at all levels of the organization. When we needed volunteers, you volunteered. When we were faced with activation, you volunteered to be activated. If the war effort needed any portion of the 439th AW and we had it to give, you gave it.

We are up to 1,212 personnel activated, with many of you deploying. You are successfully accomplishing JOB ONE – our support of the war on terrorism. You have done this through our number one priority – readiness.

I believe this is reflected in the selection of the 439th AW as the winner of the ARMSTRONG TROPHY for 2001 as the best Reserve unit in 21st Air Force. A well deserved pat on the back for all of us. Congratulations to every member of the wing.

In May, we face another set of challenges - a host of inspections. We will host the AFRC/IG from April 30 to May 5 for our Unit Compliance Inspection. At the same time, the AF Inspection Agency (AFIA) will be administering a Health Services Inspection (HSI) to the 439th AMDS. On May 6, 21st Air Force begins the site visit for the Aircrew Standardization/Evaluation of the 439th Operations Group, including the 337th AS and 439th AES, through May 13. Then on May 16, a different AFIA team will be here to administer the HSI to the 439th ASTS through May 19.

These inspections bring "BIG PICTURE" feedback to our daily operations. They give us another set of eyes to make sure we are staying on course. We stand to learn from each of these. I expect you to take the time to answer any questions the team members have and show them all they ask to see. These learning opportunities are important for us as we can improve by listening and applying the feedback we get during these inspections.

Remember the three B's: Be Cordial, Be Open, and Be Honest. This way we stand to gain the most from their visits. Remember - what will distinguish us as a unit is not the grade, but rather what we do with the feedback given by these teams to improve our organization!

THANKS FOR ALL YOU DO!

Golf scramble set for May 16 in Westfield

The ninth annual Air Force Association Spring Golf Scramble is scheduled for May 16, at 9:30 a.m., at the Shaker Farms Country Club in Westfield, Mass.

The scramble benefits nine local schools involved in the USA Today Visions program. The entry fee is $70 per person and 36 four-person teams may enter on a first come-first served basis. The fee includes greens fee, golf cart, and lunch and dinner.

Trophies will be awarded in the following categories: first, second, third, and last place finishes; men's and women's longest drive; men's and women's closest-to-the pin.

Interested golfers should contact Sue Alexander at Ext. 2851 for more information.

Westover Club to host membership night

The Westover Club will host a membership benefits night on May 4 offering numerous free activities to members.

The event will feature a wine and beer tasting and plenty of mouth-watering hors d'oeuvres to be served from 5-7 p.m., said Larry A. Pepin, club manager.

Live entertainment by the rock band "Memphis Flyers" is set to start at 7 p.m. in the club's lounge, Pepin said.

Unlike the club's past membership benefit nights, this event will have various booths, staffed by personnel to explain available privileges for members, he said.

Members may also attend free with one guest. Additional guests may attend for a nominal fee and non-members can join at the door during the event. For more information, contact the club at 593-5531.

439th unveils "Let's Roll!" nose art at C-5 hangar ceremony

by SSgt. Andrew Biscoe

Local congressmen, Air Force Reserve leadership and a crowd of Westover reservists gathered with a C-5 in the pull-through hangar on March 15 for the unveiling of the "Let's Roll!" nose art.

"Let's Roll!" were the last words from passenger Todd Beamer over his cellular phone. Beamer was among the passengers on United Flight 93 who fought back against terrorist hijackers before the jetliner crashed in Pennsylvania on Sept. 11, 2001. Earlier this year, the Air Force directed that the artwork would be applied to one aircraft in every flying unit throughout the service until Sept. 11, 2002. Westover leadership decided that C-5 number 90017, which already displays the "City Of Chicopee II" on its side, would be the suitable choice.

Scores of Westover reservists attending the nose art ceremony included the maintenance workers who work on tail number 017. The patriotic decal on the aircraft reminded one of its crew chiefs of the giant transport's contribution to Operation Enduring Freedom. "It gives you a lot of pride," said MSgt. Harry Herbert, a 29-year member of the 439th Airlift Wing. Herbert oversees the maintenance on number 017.

Local congressmen thanked the 439th AW for their dedication to duty in the war on terrorism. "The men and women of the American military have performed brilliantly during the past six months," said Congressman Richard Neal (D-Springfield). "It's an extraordinary challenge to all of you. But, at the same time, I can't think of a base that any congressman could be more honored to represent than I am here at Westover, and indeed, the city of Chicopee."

Maj. Gen. James Bankers, 22nd Air Force commander and a former commander of the 439th AW, spoke of his pride in their sacrifices for the war on terror. "As far as I am concerned, you are all heroes in my book," he said. "It's an honor for me to serve with people like you." Bankers called the nose art a symbol of American determination following the devastation from the terrorist attacks. "The nose art is going to represent the spirit of 9/11," he said. "The spirit of 9/11 is one of solidarity ... it's also a warrior's call."

For TSgt. Mark Willette, C-5 017 crew chief, the sight of the nose art on the C-5 reaffirmed his contribution to the war and his patriotism. "I feel pride for what we do all the time," he said. "It's a nice tribute to the passengers on Flight 93. I wish it was on all of the aircraft, but I'm glad it's on mine."

"The City of Chicopee II" was added to number 017 in December 1999. That Galaxy was the first to join the 439th AW in October 1987. The original "City of Chicopee" name belonged to a B-52 Stratofortress assigned to the 99th Bombardment Wing at the base in the 1950s and 1960s.

439th AW named top Air Force Reserve unit in 21st Air Force

The 439th Airlift Wing was recently named the Air Force Reserve winner of the 2002 Lt. Gen. Malcolm B. Armstrong Trophy, which is awarded annually to the best active-duty, Air Force Reserve Command or Air National Guard unit that falls under 21st Air Force. Westover's 439th AW reports to 21st AF in time of mobility.

The awarded is named after Lt. Gen. Malcolm Armstrong, who during his tenure as 21st Air Force commander, wanted to annually recognize the outstanding wings that come under the numbered air force's command during wartime.

"I can't say enough of the dedication and professionalism of the men and women of the wing," said Col. Martin M. Mazick, 439th AW commander. "From the success of the EORI to winning the Air Force Outstanding Unit Award to supporting current real-world operations, the Patriot Wing has continued to shine. Every person in this wing, their families and employers should be as proud as I am of this award as it took a team effort to earn this prestigious distinction," he said.

During the award period, the 439th AW participated in a number of real-world contingency mission, including supporting the Sept. 11 attack response, Operation Enduring Freedom and the homeland defense mission called Operation Noble Eagle. Other highlights included humanitarian missions, and "excellent" rating for initial response and operations during the Expeditionary Operational Readiness Inspection, a banner year for recruiting, numerous quality of life initiatives and a safety program that prevented flight mishaps.

Westover last won the Armstrong Trophy in 1999.

"We've clearly proven that our motto of 'Team of Choice' is fitting. 2001 was a busy year for us and despite the high tempo, we continuously performed at a level worthy of this recognition," Mazick said. "We will remember 2001 for the way in which it changed our lives, but I will also remember it for the way in which we responded to the call."

Westover teams maintain C-5 support overseas

EDITOR'S NOTE: Air Force Reserve security guidelines prohibit use of surnames for reservists serving overseas in support of Operation Enduring Freedom.

By SMSgt. Sandi Michon

A single mom leaves her only daughter behind, a loadmaster is on the road for 35 out of the last 39 days, troops spend three months in cramped quarters in a foreign country, and a dad exits a C-5 at Westover and runs to greet his wife and two small kids — he's missed half of his baby's life while away.

The story of Operation Enduring Freedom is told not only with dollars and cents, activation figures and deployment rotations, but in the lives of real reservists at Westover.

Snapshots of nearly 100 of these lives were taken on a C-5 mission to Spain, March 26-28. Approximately 40 Westover reservists departed for a 90-day deployment swap-out, as an equal number eagerly waited to pass the baton and get back home.

The mood was somber in the C-5 rear troop compartment as reservists settled in for the eight-hour flight. Each person faces unique challenges of separation — some have already been removed from home because of activation — now all will be far from home. Few looked forward to the deployment, but all interviewed were proud to do what needed to be done. "No one wants to leave home and family, but we're glad to do our part," said MSgt. Dave, from the 439th Aircraft Generation Squadron.

TSgt. Joaquim, with the 439th MXS, said he will miss his wife and two kids, but his deployment is actually a return trip, and it carries bittersweet memories. He served on an Aerospace Expeditionary Force (AEF) rotation almost two years ago, and it was the last time he saw his father alive. Joaquim, a native of Portugal, still owns a home there and was able to visit his ailing father. Referring to his current deployment, he said, "I actually like the food and the culture here."

While Joaquim is fluent in Portuguese and Spanish, most others are not so fortunate, making acclimation to the culture more difficult.

Acclimation to working at a foreign base is also difficult. It's like working in someone else's garage — they don't have the same tools, and they don't store spare parts for your car model. During their first full day in Spain, incoming and outgoing teams met to brief the "garage." They explained current projects, took bench stock inventories, and briefed protocol procedures.

The maintenance mission is to support all C-5s transiting through the air base and to help with any other aircraft as needed. The four C-5s on the ground on March 27 provided instant work for the incoming crew, including an engine change.

"Their contributions are superb," said Lt.

Team effort provides childcare for 90-day deployment

By SMSgt. Sandi Michon

TSgt. Teresa*

Supervisors are known to look after their people, but it's not often that they take care of their people's people.

But that's exactly what happened when TSgt. Teresa's* supervisor, SMSgt. Gary Hebert and his wife agreed to care for Teresa's 14-year-old daughter, Monica, during her mom's 90-day deployment.

"Enduring Freedom is a team thing... we wanted to help Teresa concentrate on what she needs to do while deployed and minimize the stress on Monica," explained Hebert, shop chief with the 439th MXS hydraulics shop. Hebert credits his wife Laurie as a key player on the "team" and said she had also helped out during Desert Storm when a couple in the hydraulics shop struggled to balance childcare demands between opposite 12-hour shifts. Both have known Teresa since 1983, when she served on active duty at Travis AFB, Calif.

"She's a good mom and she's done a good job raising her daughter," Hebert said.

As Teresa came off her first 12-hour shift providing C-5 maintenance in Europe, she already missed her daughter, but she knew she was where she needed to be. "It's important to support Enduring Freedom; we're all pulling together for the same thing," she said.

Teresa, who lives in Chicopee, made long-term dependent care arrangements with her sister in Kentucky. While activated at Westover, mom and daughter were able to continue their lives as normally as possible, but a 90-day deployment posed unique problems. "I didn't want my daughter to have to switch schools and be uprooted from her friends," Teresa explained.

She discussed her conflict with her supervisor. Hebert then spoke with his wife, and the two offered to have Monica stay with them and their two teenaged children.

"I'm very thankful for their support," said Teresa, "Monica is happy there and I'm comfortable with the arrangements."

Teresa as been a single parent through a portion of her 29-year military career, so she is no stranger to dependent care challenges. But, both mom and daughter have developed a mutual respect in the process. "She is such a great kid," said Teresa, her eyes glistening. When the maintenance commander presented wing coins to deploying reservists as a token of appreciation, Monica brought the coin to school. She shared her pride as she explained to her friends and teachers that her mom got it for serving her country.

Teresa three-month deployment stint is just beginning, but she is resolute. "I miss my family already, but I remind myself each day that we'll get through this."

Col. Mitch Witherspoon, the airbase squadron commander. "Westover reservists are true professionals, highly skilled, real team players. We have other support, but they have been our anchor," he said.

To welcome the new maintenance team, the outgoing team hosted a barbecue — under a pavilion they built themselves. Westover reservists also built picnic tables, and a complete footbridge to contribute their talents to the rather austere base. Burgers sizzled and footballs flew as reservists completed the handoff of responsibility to the new crew. During the barbecue, reservists shared their experiences with media representatives on the mission. It was clear that they had gelled as a team. "You get really close," said SSgt. Mark Schabek, 439th MXS aircraft mechanic. "When you can't be with family — this becomes family," he said, gesturing toward the surrounding reservists. Many nodded knowingly when he talked of missing little things. "I miss my own room, my stereo, a private bath, driving my car — so many things you work so hard for."

They also offered advice on coping with deployment. When asked when do you adjust to being away, one member quipped, "when you get back to Westover!"

"You have to psyche yourself up before you leave," said TSgt. Dave Sadler, in a more serious tone. SSgt. Ron Corliss agrees. "You have to put it out of your mind and focus on the job. You have to put family and home in the back of your mind, or you get negative," he said.

C-5 support overseas...

C-5 early morning on March 27. As they waited by the passenger terminal, TSgt. Tim MacDonald revealed their eagerness. "Let's get our bags on the truck — it's one step closer to getting on the plane," he said.

During the eight-hour flight home, Westover's aircrew was back in the saddle, providing a vital link for Enduring Freedom. The nine-member, augmented crew totaled 41,900 flying hours between them — that's 4.78 years in the air. "That's 'wheels in the well' time, and doesn't include preflights, postflights, uploading or downloading," explained SMSgt. John Duffy, the 337th AS loadmaster who has spent most of the last month and a half in the air. His stats illustrate the sacrifice aircrew members make as the operations tempo continues to increase in support of Operation Enduring Freedom.

Once back at Westover, family members waiting at the fence by Hangar 9 craned their necks to catch a glimpse of loved ones departing the C-5. Even the media representatives exiting the aircraft became emotional seeing Corliss run to the fence to greet his wife and two little ones.

The homecoming tears and embraces pen the details of the evolving story of Operation Enduring Freedom — a story not told by fact and figures — but by personal sacrifices in the call of duty.

Aroma therapy for frequent flyers

By SMSgt. Sandi Michon

The scent of pancakes, bacon and eggs wafts through the C-5 flight deck, overpowering the ever-pervasive odor of jet fumes and oil. SMSgt. Gary Miller, 337th Airlift Squadron flight engineer, cooks breakfast for the aircrew halfway through a mission that began with a briefing just after dawn and ended time zones later as they ferried troops overseas for a deployment swap-out on March 26-28.

It's aroma therapy for the aircrew and a taste of home that they seldom enjoy as they fly frequent back-to-back missions for Operation Enduring Freedom.

"It's a morale builder. It helps pass the time and gives everyone something to look forward to," said SMSgt. John Duffy, 337th AS loadmaster, who prepared chicken parmesan and black bean rice on the return leg of the mission.

According to Duffy, logging hundreds of hours in the air is taxing on aircrew health and a typical C-5 mission with an augmented crew averages between 16-26 hours.

He grimaced as he figured the number of box lunches a typical aircrew member eats in a year. "When we cook, we eat healthier," he said, "You also work better when you eat well."

Cooking "gourmet" meals in a C-5 galley is no small challenge. The galley consists of a small refrigerator, coffeemaker, a 15x15-inch convection oven and a small countertop. "It takes a lot of planning," joked Duffy, and said some crews created cooking kits for trips. "You have to be creative," he said, citing electric frying pans, and crock-pots as useful cooking tools.

It's also become a friendly culinary rivalry between aircrew sections. Informal aircrew polling reveals Maj. Vito Addabbo capturing top recognition for the pilot section — with repeated kudos for his lasagna. Maj. Lou Shogry and Maj. Matt Warren earned honorable mention in the same category.

Miller, MSgt. Jeanie Beadle and TSgt. Steve Bryant have prepared memorable mobile meals as flight engineers, and SMSgt. Tom Dzwonkus (439th OG), MSgt. Dan Hogan and SSgt. Eva Swedock were highlighted as top cooks in the loadmaster section.

The 337th organized a chili cook-off in February to compare culinary talents. MSgt. Joe Fitzgibbons, 439th AW command and control journeyman, won according to 337th Airlift Squadron First Sergeant MSgt. Pam White. "His chili was very, very hot," she said, adding that the chili entries had to be cooked on base.

Apparently, Westover's maintenance folks are catching on. Reservists catching sleep en route to a 90-day overseas deployment were comforted as the rear troop compartment filled with the delicious aroma of "home-baked" chocolate chip cookies.

"It was a nice touch," said one of the maintenance members.

BON APPETIT — SMSgt. Gary Miller, 337th AS flight engineer, serves up breakfast while en route to Spain.

Family Readiness Recovers Old Name

When the Family Readiness office began in 1993, it was originally identified as the Family Support Center. In 1994 the name was unofficially changed to Family Readiness. The change intended to align the Family Support program, with the Air Force Reserve mission of readiness. However, over the years, the Family Readiness mission continued to grow in leaps and bounds to adapt to the demands of the Air Force Reserve Command mission.

Since the change was unofficial, and because the name Family Readiness does not reflect all of the services we provide to our military community and their families, HQ AFRC changed our name back to the Family Support Center.

The Family Support Center is proud to be a team player in the newly joined Community Support Center which is located at 100 Walker Avenue (Bldg. 1100, to the right of the base chapel). With the added support of the Chapel, USO and Retiree Activities Office, the Community Support Center offers a "One-Stop" personal assistance center. We hope you will stop by to check out our new look and give us a chance to serve you and your family.

Westover Salutes Long-Time Base Volunteers

Where would we be without the outstanding support of our Westover Retiree Activity Office (RAO) and USO volunteers? There would be no "Space A" passenger service, no retiree information, no food locker, no coffee and doughnuts, no Christmas or Easter party for our kids, no Thanksgiving or Christmas dinners, and more importantly, no smiling faces that never say no to any request for help.

To recognize these true champions, Westover hosted a Volunteer Excellence Award ceremony on April 22. One hundred-eighteen RAO and USO volunteers were recognized for outstanding support and Chief Ed Morris, who manages the "Space A" program, was selected as this year's Volunteer Excellence Award winner. Be sure say thanks to these folks when you see them!

Sip & Chat Offers Single Parent and Spousal Stress Relief

Beginning last October, our military spouses of activated reservists have carried a significant burden of being both mother and father to their children, taking care of their home, finances, and many other countless tasks that normally they would share with their military spouse. Together with our single military parents, who already had this burden, the burden of different shifts, childcare problems, and loss of pay were included. The Family Support Center and Base Chapel have joined programs to provide an opportunity for these spouses and single parents to share experiences, gain support, and get a short break from their children. The Sip & Chat is held in Bldg. 1100 in the chapel every Saturday A UTA from 2:00-3:30 p.m. Reservations are necessary to ensure we plan for you and any childcare needs you may have. Please call the Family Support Center listed at the front of this supplement for more information.

Perks May Be Available to Activated Reservists

Since the events of September 11, in order to show their support for those who protect our country, many private businesses and organizations have been offering some great deals and discounts to military members.

Sears Portrait Studio is offering a free family portrait to all military personnel. Call your local Sears store for details. The following web pages are also offering military discounts:

Air Force Aid Society Assistance "There In Times of Emergency"

The Air Force Aid Society, since its creation in 1942 as a non-profit organization, has helped countless members of the Air Force community. Strong support for AFAS programs and objectives is reinforced each year by the substantial personal contributions made by the active force, all of which are used solely for emergency assistance. Although AFAS receives no appropriated or non-appropriated funds, close ties are maintained between the Society and Air Force officials.

The mission of the AF Reserves and National Guard has changed considerably and because the operations tempo has increased dramatically in the past few years, the AFAS has been receptive to lobbying from Family Support personnel throughout the command to provide more benefits to Reserve personnel and their families. They have gradually introduced several programs that directly benefit Reservists to include: the telephone calling card program, Bundles for Babies, the Hap Arnold Scholarship Program, and recently, a more relaxed eligibility policy towards providing financial assistance to deployed and TDY reservist/guardsmen.

As the tragic events of September 11th enveloped our nation, the AFAS announced later during that week that Air Force Reserve and National Guard units would be able to obtain financial assistance at the unit level through Family Support Centers. While the announcement may have seemed tied to national events, AFAS had been considering the expansion to the Reserves and Guard for some time. This is a tremendous advantage for Reservists and Guardsmen serving their country. It can no longer be said that the AFAS is strictly an active duty program. The staff at the AFAS has closely listened and responded to the needs of Reservists and Guardsmen. They have done it rapidly and have welcomed the Reserve and National Guard with open arms. If you have an emergency financial situation, call the Family Support Center for more information.

Red Cross Revs Up To Enhance Assistance For Reserve Components

As military troops gear up and move out to fight worldwide terrorism, the American Red Cross is revving up to enhance its assistance to National Guard and Reserve troops and their families, according to the American Forces Press Service. Red Cross officials want Guardsmen and Reservists to be aware that more than 1,000 Red Cross chapters nationwide and 20,000 employees and volunteers working on military installations around the world are ready to provide them emergency service around the clock. Service members and their families look to the Red Cross for worldwide emergency communications, confidential counseling, emergency financial assistance, family support programs and veterans assistance. During the year 2000, for instance, the Red Cross transmitted 53,472 e-mail messages and received 52,696 replies for military and civilian personnel around the world. "Every day, we carry the sad news of a death -or joyful news of a birth - to service men and women worldwide," said Sue Richter, vice president of American Red Cross Armed Forces Emergency Services. "We often arrange emergency travel, enabling military families to be together. The long separations and stressful situations that occur when a service member is stationed abroad often place a serious emotional strain on families." Internet Offers Way For Troops To Receive Messages Of Support

With Operation Dear Abby and the Any Service member mail programs falling victim to the anthrax scare, Stars and Stripes has been inundated with requests and suggestions from Americans looking for a new way to show their support and send their love. Thus, Messages of Support was born. The feature originally appeared in the European edition of Stars and Stripes on October 10. But because of the overwhelming response, the program was extended to include the Pacific edition, beginning November 12. Messages are limited to 30 words and will be printed on a first-come, first-run basis. Stars and Stripes reserves the right to omit any ad determined inappropriate and to screen and edit all messages. Messages can be e-mailed to Stars and Stripes 24 hours a day at supportmessages@estripes.com. The Family Support Center also offers Internet access for e-mailing military loved ones.

Identity Theft Is Real

Identity theft is a major problem. If you think it can't happen to you, think again. A sister Family Support Office received a phone call in their office just a couple of weeks ago from a dependant spouse who had her identity stolen. She took all the follow-up steps (after the fact), but her credit rating is in terrible shape and a long way from recovery. It can take months, even years to straighten out and costs hundreds of dollars. Here are a few hints to protect yourself:

1. Place the contents of your wallet on a photocopy machine, do both sides of each license, credit card, etc. You will know what you had in your wallet and all of the account numbers and phone numbers to call and cancel.
2. Keep the photocopy in a safe place. If you have a scanner on your computer you can scan them and store in on a FLOPPY, not just on your hard drive.

A corporate attorney sent this out to the employees in his company: We've all heard horror stories about fraud that's committed us in your name, address, social security number, credit, etc. Unfortunately I (the author of this piece who happens to be an attorney) have firsthand knowledge, because my wallet was stolen last month and within a week the thief (thieves) ordered an expensive monthly cell phone package, applied for a VISA credit card, had a credit line approved to buy a Gateway computer, received a PIN number from DMV to change my driving record information online, and more.

But here's some critical information to limit the damage in case this happens to you or someone you know. As everyone always advises, cancel your credit cards immediately, but the key is having the toll free numbers and your card numbers handy so you know whom to call. Keep those where you can find them easily. File a police report immediately in the jurisdiction where it was stolen, this proves to credit providers you were diligent, and is a first step toward an investigation (if there ever is one).

But here's what is perhaps most important: Call the three national credit reporting organizations immediately to place a fraud alert on your name and social security number. I had never heard of doing that until advised by a bank that called to tell me an application for credit was made over the Internet in my name. The alert means any company that checks your credit knows your information was stolen and they have to contact you by phone to authorize new credit. By the time I was advised to do this, almost 2 weeks after the theft, all the damage had been done.

There are records of all the credit checks initiated by the thieves' purchases, none of which I knew about before placing the alert. Since then, no additional damage has been done, and the thieves threw my wallet away this weekend (someone turned it in). It seems to have stopped them in their tracks.

Representative proposes lowering minimum reserve retirement age

Legislation was introduced in the U.S. House of Representatives Feb. 28 to lower the minimum age required to claim reserve retirement pay.

Currently, reservists must wait until age 60 before applying for this retirement benefit. If adopted, the resolution would lower the age to 55.

H.R. 3831, introduced by U.S. Representative Jim Saxton of New Jersey, seeks to amend Title 10 of the United States Code, which includes details on who may receive military retirement pay and benefits.

To qualify for reserve retirement, reservists must complete 20 qualifying years of service with the final eight qualifying years spent as a member of a reserve component.

Before reaching age 60, they are classified as "gray area" retirees, a category that allows them to claim many reserve benefits but not retirement pay.

Although introduced in the House, the resolution has a long road to travel before becoming law. The appropriate committee must first review the proposal before it is considered by the full House, and the U.S. Senate has to concur with the wording or consider a comparable bill. During the often-lengthy process, the wording of the bill may be modified in order to reach a consensus.

If approved by both chambers of Congress, the proposal is included with other legislation and sent to the president for his approval and signature.

People can learn more about the proposal by going on the Web and accessing www.house.gov.

Computer users first line of defense against intruders

ROBINS AIR FORCE BASE, Ga. — It's always there, available at the touch of a key. Although the Internet streamlines Air Force Reserve Command business and speeds up communication, it's vulnerable — that is, unless computer users protect it.

If users neglect basic security precautions, the Internet capabilities AFRC users need may not be there to carry vital mission information.

Reservists and others throughout the Department of Defense routinely use the Internet despite its vulnerability. The vulnerability is underscored by the number of recent attempts to break into it. In 1999, DOD computer security systems and specialists foiled nearly 22,500 would-be intruders and another 24,500 in 2000. There is no let up in sight.

Computer users should follow these security tips:

- Use the automatic screen saver feature so the monitor goes dark when you leave your desk and lock your machine when you walk away from it by selecting Ctrl, Alt, Del and Lock)
- Scan all discs for viruses using McAfee Virus Scan or Norton Symantec before opening them.
- Do not use any unlicensed software on AFRC computers, including programs you may be using on your home computer.
- Do not download software from the Internet. See your workgroup administrator so he or she can get the software you need from a secure source.
- Report any suspicious e-mails or virus warning notices to your workgroup administrator. Do not open any suspicious e-mails or attachments.
- Change your password often, using at least eight characters from three of four groups — uppercase, lowercase, number and special character. The system automatically enforces a 90-day password change as required by Air Force Instructions.

Griffin Services marks two-year base anniversary

by SSgt. Andrew Biscoe

Griffin Services marked its two-year anniversary in March with a celebration held at the Westover Club. Griffin took over as the base operating contractor in March 2000.

The Atlanta-based company is responsible for the general day-to-day operations at Westover, the largest Air Force Reserve Command base in the United States. James Griffin, chief executive officer of Griffin Services, joined Col. Martin M. Mazick, 439th Airlift Wing commander, and Griffin employees for the event at the club.

Mazick recently reflected on the changeover, which he called the most significant personnel realignment at Westover since the Air Force Reserve took over the base in 1974 from the active-duty Air Force. The colonel had only been on base for a few months when it took place. "It definitely had its growing pains, only because it was a change," Mazick said. "Any time you change people's lives, people tend to react."

Jim Faye, supply and fuels accountable officer, has been at Westover since 1970. He agreed with Mazick about the significance of the Griffin change. After the last active-duty people left Westover in 1974, it was up to the federal government to staff many of the civilian areas on the base. That no longer was the case in March 2000. "It was a negative change - people lost their jobs," Faye said. "It was a rough beginning. We had to come to understand the contract. There was a learning curve."

Faye said Mazick was instrumental in smoothing out relations between the military and the contractor. "Colonel Mazick was a big part of it because he stepped up," Faye said. "His attitude to work with the contractor as a partner with the base personnel was a very important part of the changeover. He had to face a hostile bunch of people that were looking at many unknowns ... they could be real tough cookies. It was their livelihood that could be affected. It was their living."

But as the days and months went by, the atmosphere improved between Griffin and the employees, Faye said. "It didn't take long to settle into a better relationship," he said. "Griffin hired a lot of our civil service employees that were in supply."

Griffin's job is to maintain Westover day-to-day. While the base was much larger as a major SAC base some 30 years ago, the remaining base property is still large. Griffin crews mow more than 1,600 acres of grass. That land is part of the 2,500 acres that makes up Westover. Griffin employs 90 men and women, said project manager Charlie Cotter. About a year ago, crews cleared six feet of grass and brush on either side of the fence that surrounds the base. Its perimeter stretches 18 miles.

Griffin handles all supply operations. The contractor processes about 30,000 transactions per month, Cotter said. Griffin also handles real property maintenance, the traffic management office, vehicle maintenance, and fuels. Since Westover is the closest fully-operational base to Europe, military flying units often stop at the base on their way to or returning from overseas locations. Workers for Maytag Aircraft Corp., a Griffin subcontractor, are often the first faces of Westover visiting aircrews see. The Maytag workers drive the "follow me" trucks on the airfield and assist pilots with parking their aircraft.

To keep communication flowing, Griffin management and the senior Westover leadership hold monthly meetings to discuss projects on the base and any other problems. "We're integrating into functional areas like base ops and civil engineering," Cotter said. "We're still working at trying to be one team. There is still some work to do."

While Griffin celebrated the anniversary, another era passed as well, when it was announced in March that project manager David Rauhecker would be moving to Atlanta to be director of Air Force contracts. Griffin also has contracts at other reserve bases including Dobbins ARB, Ga., Niagara Falls Air Reserve Station, N.Y., and Willow Grove ARS, Pa.

Cotter, 49, arrived in September and was hired as the deputy project manager. He is a retired Air Force colonel who served for 26 years in a variety of senior management positions. While Cotter's experience

Quick-thinking MSgt. averts disaster at shoppette gas station

by SSgt. Duane Meszler

An off-duty security forces master sergeant put out a car fire that flared up a few feet away from the base shoppette's gas pumps in March.

MSgt. Michael Gallant was off-duty and inside the store picking up groceries when an Army reservist burst inside to tell the clerk his car was on fire. While the clerk dialed 911, Gallant ran out of the store to check on the man's car.

"When I ran out of the shoppette you could see the flames coming from under the hood," said Gallant, who quickly grabbed a fire extinguisher. "I gave it a couple of good blasts from the extinguisher and it was out. It was a good thing the extinguisher was right there." After the flames were out, Gallant and other customers pushed the man's car safely away from the gas pumps. The man's father later arrived to pick him up while the car was towed, said MSgt. Kevin Cahill of the 439th Security Forces Squadron.

"The scene was secured even before the fire department arrived," Cahill said. "Had Sergeant Gallant not been there and taken swift action, the situation could have been disastrous," he said. Maj. Mary Ann Lutz, 439th SFS commander, said Gallant's actions were exemplary. "I would hope that all my SF's - whether on duty or off, could react in such a fine matter," she said. "Sergeant Gallant is always a responsible guy."

Lutz said she has put Gallant in for an Air Force Achievement Medal for his quick thinking at the shoppette on March 11.

History, family, and Westover have a lot in common for SSgt. Paul LeMay Jr. He doesn't have to look beyond Westover to find the other two.

His father, Paul LeMay Sr., was assigned to the base from 1975-1984. Decades before that, another LeMay - a cousin - occupied an office in Bldg. 1100 while he savored his hallmark cigars.

That relative was Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, who commanded Strategic Air Command (SAC) from 1948-1957. Before he assumed command of SAC, the general was assigned to Westover's headquarters in the early 1940s as the operations officer for Eighth Air Force.

These days, SSgt. Paul LeMay can't help feeling nostalgic when he sees Bldg. 1100. One of its offices features a large picture window - the same one from which the famous general peered from long ago. The vintage structure now houses the retiree affairs office, the chaplain, and family readiness, but long ago housed the headquarters of SAC's Eighth Air Force and, later on, the 57th Air Division.

"I always look over there," LeMay said, as he gestured toward Westover's oldest building. "I try to imagine him there."

So when the young LeMay meets people, they often think of the highest-ranking one first, he said. "Retirees know the general. They say 'I served with him.'"

Paul LeMay Jr.'s grandfather - Joseph LeMay - was a cousin of General LeMay. "I'm carrying on a family tradition," said Le-

"It's outstanding I'm serving on the base he was at. The general was a strategic genius."

- SSgt. Paul LeMay Jr.

May, 33. Paul LeMay Sr., worked in the public affairs office as a photographer and in recruiting and base supply.

"I am proud of the fact that we're all related," said Paul LeMay Sr., who recently spoke on the phone from his house in northeastern Maine. He's glad his son is continuing the family's presence at Westover. "I'm proud of my son. He is loyal and dedicated."

Like his son, LeMay was often on the receiving end of some comments from servicemembers who caught his last name. "I would get razed a lot of times," he said. "I didn't want to make a big deal of it."

Paul LeMay Sr. admired General LeMay's "all-out" warfighting strategy. "That's what made him a great leader ... he accomplished phenomenal things," he said.

The junior LeMay got out of the Navy in 1997 after working aboard an amphibious assault ship. His ship got some high profile recognition while he was aboard. "They filmed our ship in the movie 'Apollo 13,'" he said.

LeMay learned of an Air Reserve Technician (ART) opening at Westover and promptly took the job in 1999. He first joined the Navy and worked aboard an amphibious assault ship. LeMay said he didn't join the Air Force because of his name. "I didn't think I had the smarts," he said. "I was afraid they were going to expect too much out of me because of my last name."

But his career didn't turn out that way. "They treated me according to my rank," he said, adding how much he admires his renowned cousin.

"He (the general) and his wife - they built the Air Force," LeMay said. "It's outstanding I'm serving on the base he was at. The general was a strategic genius. He totally re-arranged our bombing runs. He told 'em straight up. He

General LeMay was 8th AF ops officer at base in early 1940s

Decades ago, Westover was home to one of the most well-known Air Force generals of the 20th century and considered by many to be the pioneer of Strategic Air Command (SAC).

Gen. Curtis E. LeMay was the operations officer for Eighth Air Force at Westover in the early 1940s. Then a lieutenant colonel, LeMay quickly rose through the ranks to become one of the youngest officers to pin on general. He was SAC commander in chief from 1948-1957. Shortly after he left his SAC post to become Air Force vice chief of staff, LeMay returned to Westover and made aviation history.

LeMay flew a record-setting flight in a KC-135 from Westover to Buenos Aires, Argentina on Nov. 12, 1957. He was at the controls of a 13 hour, 2 minute, 51 second flight that spanned 6,322.85 miles.

The general later became the Air Force chief of staff. He retired in 1965. He died on March 3, 1990 in California at the age of 83.

didn't care what politician you were. It's too bad that we weren't in at the same time."

LeMay has a 5-year-old son. He hopes young Zachary will some day wear the uniform too. "Whatever he chooses ... I'll help groom him towards it." Meanwhile Paul LeMay Jr. is continuing a family tradition. "I serve the people who have gone before me," he said, as he got ready for work. "They made America what we stand for today."

Wing fitness challenge set for May 4

With a heavy emphasis on fun and teamwork, the second annual 439th Airlift Wing Fitness Challenge is scheduled for May 4.

"It's fun, everyone has a great time," said Col. Thomas Mauzaka, special assistant to the wing commander.

"It's a great way to keep in shape and enjoy the healthy competition. I'm looking forward to it," said 1st Lt. Kelly Braudis, military personnel flight commander.

The challenge involves a 2.7-mile run, canoeing approximately one and a half miles around Wade Lake's perimeter, a 3-mile mountain bike trek, and completion of an obstacle course.

The fitness event is a team competition and all teams must be coed.

Participants may use their own bikes, canoes and bike helmets. However, equipment will be provided.

Teams must enroll by May 2 for the free event. Call the fitness center at Ext. 3958 to join and for more information.

PATRIOT best in AF

Westover's monthly newspaper, "The Patriot," recently took first place for best newspaper in the Air Force for 2001. This was the second year in a row that Westover's public affairs staff had won the award. "The Patriot" led the small funded newspaper category that competed in the Air Force Media Contest. In addition, the PA staff also won the "best series" category in the contest.

The three-part series highlighted benefits of serving in the Air Force Reserve. Staff writers included Capt. Wilson Camelo, TSgt. Andrew Reitano, and SSgt. Brad Harrison, a member of the 42nd Aerial Port Squadron.

Fitness month to feature road race, mountain climbing in May

The Base Gymnasium is gearing up for "fitness month," offering various activities throughout May for reservists' enjoyment and health.

"Throughout the month, servicemembers can come to the base gym for health assessments and personal training by professional trainers. We will have tournaments and leagues as well," said CMSgt. Christopher Menard, director of services.

"All of the following events are free (except marathon)," said Menard.

Y A 5-mile road race is scheduled to take place at Westover for servicemembers, Menard said. The times, dates, and possible awards will be announced.

Y The Westover Base Bowling Center will hold bowling tournaments during May. Contact the Bowling center at Ext. 3033 for more information.

Y Leagues are being formed for both softball and basketball.

Y Softball leagues include both coed and male teams. A meeting will be held at 6:30 p.m. on May 1 at the Fitness Center for all interested participants. Game times will be announced at the meeting. Dependent on the number of female participants, a women's league is possible.

Y A basketball tournament is slated to begin in May. The tournament plans to follow a half-court, 3-on-3-team format. Contact the Base Gym at Ext. 2417 for more information.

Y A mountain climbing challenge is slated for May. Using the gym's mountain climbing machine, climbers will compete for trophies, said Menard. No date for the event was available at press time.

Y Interested in running a marathon? Westover is forming teams now to send to the U.S. Air Force Marathon held at Wright-Patterson AFB in Dayton, Ohio on Sept. 21, 2002. Cost is $35 dollars to enter and reservists are responsible to pay for own lodging and transportation. Westover plans to provide team T-shirts for the race. TSgt. Amy Morin, of the 439th Services Squadron, is coordinating the event.

For more information about the marathon, lodging, and travel arrangements, contact Morin at Ext. 2056.

Force Protection Tip of the Month

Office Security Tips: Ensure that all persons working in an office are trained to be alert for suspicious activities, persons or objects.

Arrange office interiors so that strange or foreign objects left in the room will be immediately recognized. Example, remove obvious obstructions behind which, or within, improvised explosive devices could be concealed such as draperies, closed waste baskets, unsecured desks and filing cabinets. includes commands of an air base wing at McClellan AFB, Calif., and a mission support squadron, he also was assistant executive officer to Gen. H. Norman Schwartzkopf, commander of U.S. forces in the Gulf War, for 18 months.

Mazick remembered that one of the first things Griffin people showed him was their desire to accomplish the mission.

He recalled how Rauhecker, a retired colonel, wanted to start Griffin off on the right foot. "The message that was sent to me was that the site manager understands mission accomplishment - not just getting the job done - but mission accomplishment," Mazick said. "So a lot of the progress made has definitely been credited to Mr. Rauhecker for his ability to apply his Air Force know-how to doing business in a real Air Force mission business sense.

Cotter intends to carry on that business sense. "This is like being in the Air Force, except I'm just not doing it in a blue suit anymore," he said, as his eyes widened with enthusiasm. "We're at 24-7 in many areas on base. We're here to accomplish the mission of the 439th."

"We're here to serve," Cotter said.

Reservists, schools trade community kindness

by SSgt. Andrew Biscoe

The hectic pace of activations and deployments has not affected the community spirit of Westover reservists who have visited local schools to spread the word about the 439th Airlift Wing's contribution to the war on terror.

The kindness has been mutual. Schools in Southboro, Wilbraham, East Longmeadow, and Deerfield have sent boxes of greeting cards and cookies to Westover. Many of the boxes have been placed on Westover's C-5s bound for wing members on rotations to overseas destinations in support of Operation Enduring Freedom.

A Westover senior NCO appreciated the letters from local schoolchildren during his recent three-month deployment overseas. "It was really nice to see the support," said SMSgt. Brad Tryba, production superintendent with the 439th Aircraft Generation Squadron. The way the kids express themselves is amusing ... it's kind of uplifting. It's a little touch of home."

Reservists who have visited schools include:

- TSgt. Bill Vargus, a loadmaster with the 337th Airlift Squadron, spoke to 18 first-graders on Feb. 25 at Harwich Elementary School in Harwich, Mass. about his role in the 439th AW. Vargus plans on visiting the school again in May.

- SMSgt. Sandi Michon of the 439th Airlift Wing Public Affairs office visited the Faith Baptist Christian Academy on Feb. 27. She was among the guest speakers for the academy's annual Great Americans' Day and spoke with students about being an Air Force reservist.

- Members of various squadrons from Westover visited Belchertown High School for Remembrance Day on March 11. CMSgt. Alan Rogers, 439th Maintenance Squadron, gave a 5-minute speech to about 800 people. Other reservists included: Maj. Mike Smith, Capt. Steve Taylor and MSgt. David Jones, MSgt. Gary Smith and TSgt. Shawn Harris (all with the 337th AS); SSgt. Kathy Busch, 42nd APS.

- In February, Westover maintenance workers signed their autographs on C-5 pictures provided to students in Millbury, Ware, and Warren, Mass. MSgt. Earl Duncan, 439th AGS first sergeant, was among a group of airmen who returned to St. Mary's School in Ware on March 21. The group returned to thank the students for their support during their recent deployment overseas. The squadron plans to visit more schools this spring.
